The Transparency of Evil-Jean Baudrillard 1993 This text contemplates the contemporary value of abstract issues, such as the role of terrorism in not only the political but also in the societal fabric of modern society. In his essay, "The Terrorists," Baudrillard argues that the war on terrorism is a self-servicing and self-perpetuating system that leads to the ever-expanding scope of the ability to control and manipulate. He describes the war on terror as a "pure event" that is detached from any historical context or reality.

The author challenges the notion that terrorism is a simple and straightforward event, instead arguing that it is a complex and multifaceted phenomenon that is influenced by a wide range of factors. He suggests that the war on terrorism is a relentless and continuous process that is fed by a constant cycle of fear, anxiety, and paranoia. Baudrillard argues that the war on terrorism is a "virtual" war that is created and maintained through the use of media and propaganda. He concludes that the war on terrorism is a "false solution" that is designed to distract from the underlying social and political issues that are responsible for the rise of terrorism.

what we are capable of doing when caught up in the crucible of behavioral dynamics, though, Zimbardo also offers hope. We are capable of resisting evil, he argues, and can even teach ourselves to act heroically. Like Hannah Arendt's Eichmann in Jerusalem and Steven Pinker's The Blank Slate, the Lucifer Effect is a shocking, eye-opening reminder why we need to do so.

Fascinated by the tracings of theology in the ways of American money Morrow sees a reconciliation of God and Mammon in the American money machine. He uncovers the reasons for this reconciliation in the social dynamics of the American economic system. He has written about American money in a series of individual life stories, including his own. Morrow writes about what he calls "the emotions of money," which he follows from the catastrophe of the Great Depression to the era of Bill Gates, Oprah Winfrey, and Donald Trump. He considers money's dual character—functioning both as a hard, substantial reality and as a highly subjective force and shape-shifter, a sort of dream, is money the root of all evil? Or is it a source of strength? Is money the root of all problems? Is the spread of materialism the new original sin? Is it the root of all that is evil and subversive or is it the root of all that is liberating and creative? Is there any possibility of materialism being reformed or is it too late? Is the materialism of the American way of life an essential part of the American cultural system or an anathema to it? What are the materialistic foundations of our society and culture?
